The image shows a video of Adam Sandler. He has a beard and is wearing a dark shirt. A rainbow-colored filter is applied to the video, creating a vibrant, multi-colored effect. Overlaid on the video are several text elements: a large, stylized text 'Adam Sandler' in white, with 'Adam' and 'Sandler' in a bold, sans-serif font and 'S' and 'A' in a script font; a red box containing the text 'OR WHAT WE'RE' in white; and a pink box containing the text '#temu' in white. The video is set against a dark background, possibly a wall with framed pictures.

no, it would only be "legal" if the person in the car feels they're are in danger, so unless they literally surround his car, this video would be a damning piece of evidence of premeditation

One of their people in charge of building your new home or office has videos advocating the right to legally run over protestors in the street. And he says others can do it as well. Psycho much? Not only is that illegal, I believe it's called vehicular manslaughter but I'm not sure as I'm not a lawyer, but it's also inhumane and dangerous. I would never deal with any profession that kept this man employed after his sadistic comments online. Bad company HR apparently?

I do not support companies, whose employees support vehicular manslaughter.

Travess Wolford
You just claimed employees "support vehicular manslaughter" — a criminal act. That's a false public statement, designed to damage reputation and business.
That's defamation per se and tortious interference. You will be held accountable....

I would not hire a company that has extremists threatening people lives on the internet. Travis is a dangerously spreading partisan hate and misinformation that you can legally run over liberal's. Shame on you!

Travess Wolford
You just accused me of being an extremist threatening lives and promoting political violence — that's defamation per se, tied directly to my name and designed to sabotage a business.
You didn't express concern. You launched a public attack using crimi... See more

Your Project Supervisor, Travis Matthew Wolford, has threaten the lives of protesters. Is this what your company stands for?

Travess Wolford
You just published a false criminal accusation tied directly to my full name and job title — claiming I've threatened lives. That's defamation per se, malicious in intent, and fully actionable.

You're not asking a question. You're manufacturing a lie... See more
